

Perhaps we can find a better model. Our data points corresponding to masses of 50 gm and 100 gm look suspicious.

It appears that the amount of stretch in a spring is proportional to the mass hung on the spring - at least for the range of masses we considered. For our spring

$$\text{stretch (in cm)} \approx 0.11 \times \text{mass (in gms)}.$$